FREE SAMPLE · CLIENTFLOW OUTREACH KIT

A first look at the ClientFlow Outreach Kit.

This sample gives you one complete cold-email template exactly as it appears in the full kit, one WhatsApp script, the systems overview for follow-up, and the quick-start route for week one.

1 of 20	1 of 10	4	Week 1
email templates	DM scripts	follow-up steps	quick-start route

These are not teasers - the template itself is complete. If it fits the way you work, the full kit has 19 more like it, four proposals and the lead tracker.

Quick-start: pick a lane, list 15, send 5 a day

1. Pick one problem you can solve, for one kind of business

Not 'I offer web design and SEO and Shopify' - one problem: 'I fix slow mobile bookings for clinics.' The kit's templates all assume you have this clarity; a first-contact message without it reads like a services list. 15 minutes, and it can change later as you learn what replies.

2. Build a list of 15 businesses

Not 1,500. Fifteen - real, verifiable businesses in your niche. Where to look: Google Maps for your city + service keyword; Instagram location + hashtag searches; listing sites like Justdial or IndiaMART for categories with missing or stale profiles; your city's local business associations and trade groups. For each business, save: name, website, public contact, and one specific observation. The Lead Tracker spreadsheet in this kit has a sheet built for exactly this.

3. Write one specific line per business

Not one line per template - per business. A broken form, a stale hours listing, a menu without prices, a competitor outranking them for a service they sell. The template only frames the line. Ten minutes per business is normal and it is where all the value is.

4. Send 5 messages a day, 3 days in a row

Email where email works, WhatsApp only on published business numbers, LinkedIn where the person is active. Log every message in the tracker at the moment you send it - 'first contact date', 'reason for outreach', 'next follow-up date' (+3 business days). Batching the logging at midnight never happens; log as you go.

01 The Website Fix Email

Category	Web design / development
Audience	Owners of businesses that depend on their website for bookings and enquiries - clinics, studios, travel operators, coaching classes, manufacturers.
Use when	First contact. Works when the problem is visible to their customers on a phone, not a technicality you would have to explain.

SUBJECT LINE OPTIONS

One fix on `{{business}}`'s site that's easy to miss

Small bug on `{{website}}` (works fine on laptops, not phones)

Hi `{{contact_name}}`,

I tried to `{{the action their customer would take}}` on `{{website}}` and `{{one-sentence description of what breaks and where}}`.

I'm a `{{discipline}}` based in `{{city}}`, and small fixes like this are most of what I `{{do or have focused on recently}}` for `{{one real client type or client name, if you have one - otherwise delete this sentence.}}`

If you already have someone fixing this, no problem at all. If not, I can send you a short written note on what to do about it - two minutes of reading, no charge, and you don't have to get on a call to get it.

`{{your_name}}`
`{{discipline}}` - `{{city}}`

FILL THESE IN

- [ ] `{{the action their customer would take}}` - e.g. book a consultation, request a callback, check the menu.
- [ ] `{{one-sentence description}}` - must be reproducible: state the device, the browser if relevant, and the page.
- [ ] `{{discipline}}`, `{{city}}`, `{{contact_name}}` - the basics, all real.

BEFORE SENDING - CHECKLIST

- [ ] You reproduced the problem twice yourself, on a phone, before writing.
- [ ] The problem costs them enquiries, bookings, or money - not just design taste.
- [ ] No attachments, no links to your calendar, no service menu.
- [ ] Under 120 words in the body.
- [ ] You'd be comfortable if the owner forwarded this to their current web person - because one day they will.

WHY THIS WORKS

The first line is something the owner can verify in ten seconds on their own phone, which moves the message from sales pitch to helpful note. Because the whole first half is about their business, the short paragraph about you reads as context rather than selling. The offer is deliberately small a written note, no call - so a yes is easy and a no costs them nothing.

EXAMPLE - FILLED IN (FICTIONAL)

Hi Dr. Sinha,

I tried to book a home-visit slot on aarambhphysio.in from my phone and the Book Now button on the homepage opens the desktop contact page, where the phone number is an image and can't be tapped to call.

I'm a web developer based in Pune, and small fixes like this are most of what I've done recently - most recently for a diagnostics lab in Kothrud whose callback form was quietly failing since March.

If you already have someone fixing this, no problem at all. If not, I can send you a short written note on what to do about it - two minutes of reading, no charge, and you don't have to get on a call to get it.

Meera Iyer
Web developer - Pune

All business names, people and details in every example in this kit are fictional, written to show the level of specificity expected.

DON'T USE THIS TEMPLATE WHEN

- [ ] Don't invent a problem - never claim load-speed or security issues you did not actually measure.
- [ ] Don't use if the site is a few weeks old or you can see an agency is mid-redesign.
- [ ] Skip it if your fix is purely cosmetic (a colour, a font) - that reads as taste criticism, not lost bookings.
- [ ] If the same sentence could be sent to their competitor, it is too generic to send to anyone.

One WhatsApp script from the systems chapter

SAMPLE SECTION

01 WhatsApp: The Contextual Introduction

Platform	WhatsApp
Purpose	You have a genuine, non-fabricated reason to write to this number - a referral, an event, a supplier relationship, a mutual group - and you lead with exactly that context.

Hi `{{contact_name}}` - this is `{{your_name}}`, `{{one-line: who you are and how the number is real}}`. I got your number from `{{the real source - a referral, a shop board, a batch-mate group}}` - hope that's okay.

I `{{one line on what you do}}` - `{{optional second line on one real relevant thing, e.g. 'saw the new branch while passing MG Road last week.'}}`

No pitch coming - just wanted to introduce myself properly. If a `{{discipline}}` would ever be useful, I'm easy to reach here.

FILL THESE IN

- [ ] The real source of the number - if you can't state it truthfully, you should not be texting this person.
- [ ] Keep it under 60 words total; WhatsApp walls get 'hmm' and nothing else.

BEFORE SENDING

- [ ] Anoymous unsolicited WhatsApp to a business number is intrusive; sending to a genuinely public business line is fine, sending to a personal number you found is not.
- [ ] Never invent a mutual friend or a group you're not in - WhatsApp is a semi-private space; falsified context here is worse than in email.
- [ ] Send within working hours (roughly 10am-7pm); a first-touch WhatsApp at 11pm reads poorly.
- [ ] One message only. Never send two or three in a row to force a notification.

AVOID

- [ ] Don't use if the number isn't public or wasn't handed to you by someone who agreed to share it.
- [ ] Don't use it to pitch directly - the introduction is the whole job of this script.

The follow-up system, in brief

> Most Indian freelancers lose client work not because their outreach is bad, but because it stops after one message. The four-step system below is a discipline, not a script: a small number of touches, spaced properly, that you can run without keeping elaborate notes - and stop cleanly when the answer is no. A spreadsheet (the Lead Tracker in this kit) does the remembering for you.

Step 1 - Initial outreach Day 0	A reply - any reply. A 'we have someone' or 'not now' is a success at this stage, because it tells you what to do next.
Step 2 - First follow-up (with something new) About 3 business days after the first message	A reply, or a clear sign to stop. Conversion mostly happens on step 2 in practice - not because persistence wins, but because the second message is the first one most prospects actually open.
Step 3 - Second follow-up (the easy exit) 5-7 days after the first follow-up	Either a renewed conversation or a clean close. If neither comes, the thread has done its job.
Step 4 - Close the loop About 2 weeks after the second follow-up, and only once	A clean exit that leaves the relationship intact for the day they finally have the problem you solve.

The full ClientFlow Outreach Kit

ClientFlow-Handbook.pdf	Everything in this sample plus all 20 templates, 10 scripts, the full system, 4 proposals and the tracker guide - designed as a readable handbook.
Email-Templates.docx	Every template and DM script in an editable document, ready to adapt and reuse.
Proposal-Templates.docx	Four editable proposals (website, SEO, social, Shopify) with illustrative INR figures you replace.
Lead-Tracker.xlsx	The outreach tracker with status dropdowns, overdue flags, and a dashboard that works in Excel and Google Sheets.
Quick-Start-Guide.pdf	A short standalone route through the first week.

> No scraped contact data, no invented prospects, no promises about replies, clients or income. The kit is a working system; the work is yours.
